Learner Preparation:

1. Ask students by a show of hands if they think that successful businesses happen by chance (or by luck). Then mention specific companies. See if their responses are the same as when they were not thinking of a specific company. Next ask them if they are thinking at all about their own futures or if they are taking a 'wait and see' (by chance or by luck) attitude.

2. Explain to students that, just as they are thinking about their future plans, businesses too have to make plans in an effort to be successful.

Lesson Plan

Introduction (LSI Quadrant I)

1. Discuss with students the concepts of short-term and long-term goals. Ask students to volunteer what some of their short- and long-term goals are. Which ones require more planning? Tell students about S.M.A.R.T. goals and turn one of their goals into a SMART goal on the board or projector.
2. Record a list of student responses regarding the specific goals that businesses have. Keep the list where students can see it. Ask the students in pairs to select a business goal from the list and turn it into a SMART goal. Have the students write the components of the goal on a poster or flip chart, then present to the class.
3. Please refer to the a web site of your choosing for absurd patents and print enough of the invention sheets so pairs of students can have their own invention. You may print the picture only and keep the explanation of the invention to go over with the students at the end of the activity. Have the students, in pairs, examine their invention and discuss what kind of planning must have gone into that product and what the inventor is intending to do with the product. Who did the inventor create it for? How much should it sell for? How will it be marketed? They may make notes on note cards or on a piece of paper. They will then show their invention to the class and present their ideas about this product. The teacher can then identify the name of the product and tell the students what it is really about. Then students can tell if their ideas were close to the inventor ideas. This activity should show students that even if you have a great idea for a new product, there are many things to consider when you are planning how to get your product to its intended audience.
4. After you go through the inventions in #3, list the parts of a business plan on the board and check off the parts that the students actually had to discuss while conducting the activity in #3 above. Then show the students the SBA website and discuss the different parts of the business plan.

Application

Guided Practice (LSI Quadrant III):

- The teacher should cut up the different types of companies represented in the attached “Mix It Up” sheet. Fold them and have each student select one. Then, in pairs, students are to create a business idea combining both of their business types. They are to prepare each part of the Business Plan using the presentation as a guide, using computers if they are available, or they can use poster board or flip charts and draw separate sections for each section of the business plan. They should also include a drawing of their logo and company name. The entire business plan should be attractive and easy to read.

Independent Practice (LSI Quadrant III):

- Business Plan Gameboard Assignment #1 – In groups, students will create a gameboard using either poster board, flip chart or open file folders. They will include at least 20 game spaces that will contain facts relating to parts of the business plan and business ownership. Some of the blanks must contain true statements and some must contain false statements. There should also be a consequence for each blank. For example, if a student is to land on a game space that contains a true statement the consequence should be positive, i.e., move ahead x number of spaces, get an extra turn, etc. For a space that contains a false statement, there should be a negative consequence such as losing a turn or moving back spaces. Students should be creative in their gameboard format and may include additional components to their game. Game pieces and rules must also be included. Games will be played by class members to test their knowledge of business plan components.
- Organizational Chart Assignment #2 – Because an organizational or management plan is a part of a business plan, students should be familiar with an organizational chart. Students are to go online to any search engine, click on finance and/or type in any corporation name. When they select a company they are to drill down and find a list of officers for that corporation. They are to create an organization chart in a word processing software using either drawing shapes or online graphics and include each officer listed and their appropriate titles.
- Mission Statement Comparison Table Assignment #3 – Students in pairs will select 4 companies from the list of Fortune 500 companies on the web site listed in #4 in the References section above. Then, using the elements of a mission statement that are listed in #5 of the References section, create a table that identifies each element of the mission statement for each of the 4 companies. Include the appropriate phrases or words that are contained in the mission statements and write or type them into the appropriate place in the table. Some may be more complete than others. Then you will rank each of the companies' mission statements using the scale of your choice, from 1 to 4, using stars, checkmarks,

thumbs up, or another indicator of your choice. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Business Plan Project Assignment #4 – Have students prepare a completed business plan using the templates found on the SBA (Small Business Administration) web site above using any product or service idea of their choice, or they can create their own business idea. It should look professional and attractively formatted. Use diagrams and illustrations as necessary.
Summary
Review (LSI Quadrants I and IV): Q: What is the purpose of a business plan? A: To identify all aspects of your business, to minimize risk, and to show to potential investors. Q: What is the first part of a business plan? A: The Executive Summary, which contains the Mission Statement and a brief summary of the other parts of your plan. Q: Why is a Marketing Plan important? A: It provides an analysis of your competition, target market, and pricing strategy. Q: What did all businesses originally start with? A: An entrepreneurial spirit, an idea for a product or service Q: Is a business plan prepared once and left alone? A: No. A business plan is usually prepared at the inception of a business, but is updated as needed to keep information current and up-to-date.
Evaluation
Informal Assessment (LSI Quadrant III): <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Instructor will observe students during Independent Practice. 2. Instructor will assist students as needed.
Formal Assessment (LSI Quadrants III and IV): Use the assigned rubrics to evaluate the two Independent Practice Assignments (LSI Quadrant III).
Extension
Extension/Enrichment (LSI Quadrant IV): <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Have students use the business plan they created in Assignment #5 above, but this time have a different section on each page and include a cover sheet as well. Also be sure to include a page with the company logo. Place in a binder and submit to personnel at the school asking them if they would invest in their company based on what their plan looks like. 2. Ask students to submit their plan to a bank and ask for a banker's comments and suggestions as to what they like to see to loan money for a business.

MIX IT UP!

Cut up the following types of businesses and put into a 'hat', box, or whatever is available. Have each student draw one of the businesses. In pairs, students will create a new business that combines the two that were drawn by the partners.
